> THE TOURNAMEST. - The arrangement for the tournament and coronation, which comes off at Linde's Park on Friday, are being consummated with all practicable speed. The grounds will be arranged with a special view to the comfort of spectators, and their nearness to the city and accessibility by the street cars render them specially adapted to the sport. The attendance it is hoped will be largely in excess of that on any similar occasion heretofore, from the two-fold reason that the tilting promises to be more exciting and the object to which the proceeds of the occasion are to be devoted is such as must appeal more strongly than any other to the generosity and patriotism of our people. It is indeed to be hoped that a sufficient sum will be realized to replace the present wooden monument over the graves of our fallen heroes in Elmwood with one of more enduring and befitting character. Shall it not be done?

would, with all respect, suggest to the from the presentation of so attractive a programme, or that a more spucious anll be selected for its rendition. There the address, and the pastimes of the day is nothing in the experience of the pleasure-seeker more annoying than, after having one's expectations wrought up to celebration at greater length hereafter. the highest, to be turned, disappointedly, away, as was the case with dozens las evening. Then those who loft in despair of gaining entrance were perhaps even better off than others who overed about the outer doors and windows three and four deep and caught unsatisfactory glauces and sounds from within, over a sea of surging shoulder and through a perfect mist of ladies' head dresses. To be "so near and yet so far." to use the expression quietly whispered within our hearing by a lady among the "outsiders," was the very hight and sum of all aggravations. But we willingly change our theme to mention the more excellent features of the coasion. The programme, selected with nuch taste and judgment, was rendered throughout with great credit, and those anable to enter the hall were indeed deprived of a rare treat. The instrumen ations of the evening were skillfully and carefully executed, and gave decided widence of instrumental talent and culture. The welcome address, by little Miss Grace Carver, was highly appropri ate, and delivered with much ease and grace. "The Gay Deceiver" and a piece f comicality in which the petit Miss Annie McNamara appeared to great advantage and repeatedly convulsed her hearers with laughter. Miss Mary Boro's performance of the old Irish air of "Mary is her name," with variations, upon Erin's national instrument, the harp, was exquisite. She evoked from the strings as by a magic touch the very soul of the instrument, now subdued as the murmurings of the breeze and now bursting into the passion and grandeur of the tempest. Her duo with Miss Gibbons was likewise worpower. The sacred drama of the Youthful Martyrs was produced with fine effect, and the characters unexceptionably well sustained. Miss Armstrong, Miss Cockrell and Miss Mary Dollis, if we may make any exceptions, were especially happy in the rendition of their parts. A beautiful and appropriate tableau closed the entertainment, in which much of the beauty and grace of the school appeared to great advantage.
